

ANNOUNCING THE PUBLICATION OF

Race, Rights and Reparation

Law and the Japanese Internment, Second Edition

by Eric K. Yamamoto, Margaret Chon, Carol L. Izumi, Jerry Kang, Frank H. Wu (Wolters Kluwer Law & Business 2013)

During World War II, the United States government forced thousands of people of Japanese ancestry to live in internment camps on American soil. Race, Rights and Reparation: Law and the Japanese American Internment was the first text to critically explore the legal, ethical, and social ramifications of their internment—and their subsequent successful movement for reparations in the 1980s. This authoritative Second Edition speaks to today's tension between national security and civil liberties through informative parallels between the wartime incarceration of Japanese Americans and individual rights and liberties post-9/11.

"The time has come for talk of the law, the morality and the politics of redress in law school classes and this is the ideal book for it. This revised edition shows how the movement for redress for those interned by our government during World War II inspired other global redress movements including those for Native Hawaiians, African Americans and victims of sex slavery during World War II, among many other groups, and also shows the crucial lessons of internment for the war on terror."

—Alfred Brophy, Judge John J. Parker, Distinguished Professor of Law, University of North Carolina School of Law

"Unearth, confront, repair or leave an unhealed world to your children. Thanks to books like this one, we can see the choice."

—Mari Matsuda, Professor of Law, University of Hawai'i, William S. Richardson School of Law
